Straight out of Federal Prison from Seth “Soul Man” Ferranti, the Gorilla Convict writer:

PRISON STORIES

His first novel—vicious and brutal—takes readers into the netherworld of corruption and violence that Seth Ferranti calls home. This isn't OZ... this is real life.

Presented by Gorilla Convict Publications and GorillaConvict.com, this book is a gripping look into the turbulent and twisted realities of prison. The main story, Drug Dealer, tracks “Guero” as he grows to manhood in the penitentiary. Guero is faced with making choices and decisions that severely impact his life as he deals with a lengthy sentence and attempts to navigate a path through the treacherous underbelly of the beast.

Drug Dealer is intertwined with several interludes that provide anecdotes which juxtapose with the main story line, creating a myriad view of what goes down inside the Bureau of Prisons, the nation's largest prison system. The book offers up a slice of prison life served real, raw, and cold. Keeping it real and going hard just like the prisoners on lockdown.

Seth M. Ferranti's work has appeared in Don Diva, Slam, Vice, FHM, Feds, The Ave, Kyte, and King. He is also an internationally known prison basketball journalist whose articles regularly appear on hoopshype.com and prisonerlife.com. Ferranti is serving a twenty-five year mandatory minimum sentence for a first-time, non-violent drug offense. He has completed twelve calendars to date and his current release date is October, 2015.
